

Lamborn Questions Obama's Judgment in Promoting Susan Rice

Congressman Doug Lamborn (CO-05) released the following statement regarding President Obama's decision to promote former U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, Susan Rice, to become the nation's top national security adviser. The appointment does not require Senate confirmation.

"While I respect the President's authority to select his personal advisers, I question his judgment to replace resigning national security adviser, Tom Donilon, with Susan Rice, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations. Ambassador Rice deliberately misled the public during a series of appearances on Sunday talk shows after the attack on the U.S. Consulate in Benghazi, Libya and continues to withhold critical information from Congress and the American people."— Doug Lamborn
